Public Works vows to be efficient this season

James Jackson, head of Richmond City Public Works, issued a note to residents today about the local parks:

With the weather warming up and neighbors taking advantage of the wonderful parks in the area, we'd like to remind everyone that the city parks will very efficiently maintained this coming season.

With limited man hours available for cutting grass and trimming sidewalks, like last year we will striving to be efficient with our resources. We were able to reduce maintenance time at Libby Hill Park to 90 minutes in 2013, and still see room for improvement. We expect to find similar efficiencies at Jefferson and Chimborazo Parks.
